Marine Science and Technology in Greece: Challenges and Opportunities

Greece is a country with a long maritime tradition, a vast coastline and a deep connection between its people and the sea. The marine environment has shaped the economy, culture and identity of the nation for centuries. Today, the marine environment faces unprecedented challenges, including climate change, biodiversity loss, pollution and the impacts of human activities. At the same time, it offers opportunities for sustainable development, innovation and the blue economy. This presentation will provide an overview of the current state of marine science and technology in Greece, highlighting key research areas, institutions and infrastructures. It will also discuss the challenges and opportunities for the marine sector, including the impacts of climate change, the protection of marine biodiversity, the development of sustainable fisheries and aquaculture, and the emergence of the blue economy. The presentation will also discuss the role of marine science and technology in addressing these challenges and opportunities, and the need for collaboration between scientists, policymakers and stakeholders to achieve sustainable outcomes.
